Undone In Sorrow

Over yonder in the graveyard
Where the wild, wild flowers grow
Well there she laid my own true lover
She's gone from me for evermore

Fairer than the sweetest flowers
Restless as the wildest wind
Born with a love deep as the ocean
She was the girl that I did win

I left her there, back on the mountain
To see the world, riches to gain
When I returned, no earthly treasure
Could heal this heart so full of pain

Over there high up on that mountain
Beneath that little mound of clay
Oh, there's the girl, I returned to marry
Among the flowers so still she lay

So I will go and I will wander
Lay aside my earthly gain
And I won't die the man with riches
Undone in sorrow Oh I remain
Undone in sorrow Oh I remain
