Over yonder in the graveyard
Where the wild, wild flowers grow
There they laid my own true lover
She's gone from me forever more

She was fairer than the sweetest flowers
Restless as the wildest wind
Born with a love deep as the ocean
That was the girl that I did win

I left her there, back in the mountain
To see the world, riches to gain
When I returned, no earthly treasures
Could ease this heart so full of pain

Way up high upon that mountain
Beneath that little mound of clay
The girl that I returned to marry
So still among the flowers did lay

I'll go away and I will wander
Lay aside my earthly gain
I'll not end as a man with riches
Undone in sorrow I remain
Undone in sorrow I remain
